Mr. He Xiuheng, Chairman of Dynasty, said, “Dynasty is the first Sino-French joint wine brewing enterprise. It has the strong support of its two major shareholders – Tianjin Development and Remy Cointreau and has been relentlessly in its efforts to provide all consumer strata high quality and ‘excellent value for money’ wines. Dynasty wines are now among the best selling in China, and between 1997 and 2003, Dynasty was granted six times the Certificate of Best Selling Grape Wines in the PRC by the China Industry and Enterprise Information Centre. Become listed on the SEHK will accelerate our business growth, further strengthening our leading position in the China wine market.”

Dynasty was established in 1980 as a Sino-French joint venture in Tianjin. Its major shareholders include the Hong Kong listed Tianjin Development (Stock Code: 882) and world-class wine brewery Remy Cointreau, which will hold 46.5% and 24.75% interest in Dynasty respectively after the listing. This background entitles Dynasty to sources of premium quality grape vines, superb industry experience and access to international wine brewing technology. Among the six non-executive directors of Dynasty, three of them are senior management from Remy Cointreau.

Mr. He said, “Before Dynasty was established, grape wines available to the Chinese people are of a sweet taste. However, as soon as Dynasty commenced its business, the genuine European taste of ‘dry’ wine was introduced to China, leading the trend of grape wine tasting in China.”

Dynasty offers over 50 wine products in four main categories: red wine, white wine, sparkling wine and brandy.

Dynasty is a reputable household wine brand in China. It was named a Famous Brand in the 3rd China Agricultural and Cultivation Expo in 1997, and recognized as a Well-known Trademark by the Trade Mark Office of the State Administration of Industry and Commerce of China in 2000.

Dynasty’s grape wine products have won awards in various international and local wine expos and competitions. In 1984, for example, Dynasty Medium Dry White Wine received the gold prize at the Dem Auf Der Leipziger Fruhjahrsmesse, and in 1988, Dynasty Medium Dry White Wine, Dynasty Dry White Wine, Dynasty Dry Red Wine and Dynasty V.S.O.P. brandy won gold prizes at the 1st China Food Expo, etc.

The Group’s production plants are located in Tianjin, China with total site area of 114,944 square meters, equipped with wine processing production machinery, such as crushers and filtration facilities, refrigeration facilities, storage facilities, the bottling and packaging lines and wine cellars. It has 5 bottling and packaging production lines, with core production facilities imported from Italy and France. These state-of-the-art and diversified wine processing production machinery, not only enabled “one-stop” wine production procedures, but also helped to raise Dynasty’s production efficiency.

Mr. He said, “Fine grapes and superb quality harvests are the keys to fine wine production. The Group’s grape vines are brought in directly from France, including cabernet sauvignon, merlot, chardonnay, Italian Riesling and Muscat hamburg. At present, grapes used by the Group are grown mainly by grape suppliers in Ningxia, Shandong, Hebei and Tianjin.”

To ensure that the grapes used by Group are of the best quality – of minimum sugar content and standard appearance, their suppliers have to follow vineyard management and grape growing guidelines specified by the Group. The Group will also send staff to monitor the harvesting of the grapes, and grapes that fall short of the required standards will be discarded.

Dynasty’s turnover had grown steadily in the past few years, except for a slight decline of 3% in the first half of 2003 due to the SARS outbreak. The Group’s turnover rebounded in 2004, reaching over RMB620 million for the first nine months of 2004, representing 25.4% increase over the same period last year. Red wine products continued to be the Group’s core products. Its sales accounted for 94% of the Group’s total sales for the first nine months of 2004. The net profit margin stood at 48% or above in the past 3 years. The gross profit margin increased to 54% for the first nine months of 2004, resulting from the substantial increase in sales and decrease in average purchase cost of grape.

Mr. He said, “As the income of the people in China rises and their eating and drinking habits change, grape wines have emerged as the top choice among consumers of alcoholic drinks. Since Dynasty’s products are of consistently good quality and are available at reasonable prices, I believe Dynasty has immense market potential.”

Reaching every corner of the country through its extensive sales network, Dynasty is a brand of national fame. The Group has a 70-strong sales team and over 200 distributors in 16 provinces and 4 municipalities. Over the past 20 years, the Group has built and maintained close and long-term relationships with its key customers.

Although China’s wine market is more than 2,000 years old, rapid development started only in the last decade and the wine market is dominated by local brands. According to “Wine in China: A Market Analysis” published by Access Asia Limited in June 2004, there was a steady growth of grape wine market in China. The production volume has increased from 71.5 million liters in 1997 to 283.6 million liters in 2003, representing a compound annual growth rate of 25.8%. The per capita consumption of wine in the country had risen from 0.06 liters in 1997 to approximately 0.22 litres in 2003, a jump of 24.2%. However, when compared with the world’s wine consuming giants such as France (59 litres), China is lagging far behind in per capita consumption. According to World Grape Wine Industry Association statistics, between 2003 and 2008, China will beat the world and other countries in the Asia Pacific in the increase in wine sales, meaning the China wine market has plenty of room for growth.

Mr. He said, “Dynasty will seize the opportunities arising in the fast growing China wine market. We will step up marketing of our ‘Dynasty’ brand, work hard to develop the best wine products, strive to increase our market share and profit levels so as to achieve the best returns for our shareholders.”
